BUSKIN ON REABING. Opinions of an Art Critic.

That marvellous master of the English language, John Ruskin, lately delivered a lecture at Manchester, England, on "What and How to Read," From a report in a local paper we extract the following: "Books were divisible into two clas-the book of the hour and the book of all time. The distinction was not one of quali-ty, but of speaks. There, were good and had books of both classes. The good book of the hour was the useful or pleasant talk of some person with whom one might converse, printed for us. Recerds of graceful words, accounts of travel, good-humored discussions on useful subjects, statements of facts, and the passing events of real history—all such books were multiplying among us, and they were a peculiar characteristic of actoristic of the present age. But we made the worst possible use of them if we allowed them to usurp the place of true books; for, strictly speaking, they were not books at all, but only letters or news-according to our will. That court of the past differed from all living aristocracy in this, that it was open to labor and merit, and to nothing else There if one sought admittance he must rise to the level of the great men's oughts if he would understand their ords, and share their feelings if he would el their presence. [Hear, hear.] One sust show his love for those great ones in two ways—by evincing a true desire to be taught by them—to enter into their thoughts, by a true desire to feel with them—to enter into their hearts. He must ire to enter into their thoughts, not to find himself expressed by them. If the person who wrote the book was not wiser than the reader it would be of no use read ing it. If the author was worth reading, his mesning would not be got at all at once, nor would his whole meaning be atcurtained for a long time. The best suors would only write a sort of parable, in order that their meaning might not be got at unless it was really wanted. Gold was not found on the tops of mountains; but ULBVELAND POST-OFFICE, nature hid it in little fissures in the earth that men might dig deep in order to find it. So it was with the hidden treasure of visdom. Good reading required leisure and then the first requisite was to understand the author's words in the sense is which he used them. ON VULGARITY. He had said of those mighty societies of the dead that they allowed no vulgar per-son to enter. What disk they think he meant by vulgar. They would find it a truthful subject of thought, and at last they would find that the essence of all vulgariw lay in the want of sensation. In true ed vulgarity, there was a callousness which became capable of every condition of crime, without sensation at all, and it was in the blunt hand dead heart, in the diseased habit and hardened conscience, that all men became vulgar, and were for ever vulgar exactly in proportion as they were incapable of sympathy, tenderness, quick understanding, and all that deep in-tensification which might be called the contact and touch faculty of the human The symptoms of Catarth, as they generally appears are at first very slight. Persons and they have a cold, that they have frequent attacks, and are more sensitive to the changes of temperature. In this condition, the nors may be dry, or a slight discharge, this and acrid, arterwards becoming the dead, not merely to know what was the discharges are increased to quantity and other than the discharges are increased to quantity and changed in quality; they are now thick and heavy and are having a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick offensive, causing a bad breach; the voice is thick of the human soul. Come from its right causes. The bad sensation are precious, but we must not seek it, it should come from its right causes. Loyalty along the Gulf Railroad. By the latest arrival from Savantah, we are able to lay before our readers the following article from the Savannah Republican of the 7th. What is said about Governor Brown must be received with

We write amid the greatest exultation the following highly important informa-tion just received from a gentleman direct from Thomasville, six days since. He morts that in the following counties elec-on have been held since the capture of avannab, and in Thomas, Brooks, Berrlen, owndes, Clinch, Montgomery, Appling of Tatnall counties, the people had open-declared in favor of a return to the ark f safety-the Union. Overwhelming maorities were given for the restoration the United States Government, and the people were arming to defend themselves from the secessionists, who were denounc-ing the Unionists and threatening their wes. A bitter conflict was imminent at the time our informant left, and the most intense excitement prevailed, Governor Brown was at Thomasville, and it is reported that he is at the bottom of the affair, favoring the movement. The action of the Governor has produced the greatest agitation among the loyalists and disunionists, encouraging the former and embittering the traitors, who swear eternal vengeance. Governor Brown has disbanded the Georgia militia and the troops have return ed to their homes, many of them uniting in the work of redumption. In Liberty and McIntosh counties the American flag was to be unfurled from the Court Houses at Hinesville, the county seat of Liberty unty, and at Darien, county seat of Mc-Intosh county. The cars are running on the Gulf Railroad from Thomasville to the Altamaha river, and one of the conductors who managed to escape, reaching this city yester-day morning, reports that all along the line of the road the people are ripe for rev-olution. Union flags have been displayed rom several houses and the lives of their occupants threatened by the secessionists.

There is no telling where this interne-ine strife will end, but of the complete overthrow of the chagrined enemy there can be no doubt. Let our loyal lips hap rds of sincere gratitude to the Author of se glorious rays of permanent victory hich have burst upon our national hori on, proclaiming the wisdom of God, and he dawn of an honorable peace, founded pon liberty, justice, wisdom and modera-
